Prune Drive Needs Validation, Waivers For Final Success

The California Prune Pool is not yet an established fact. With tomorrow as the final deadline for the validation of all contracts the pool has over 10,000 tons to consider. These tons are either carrying riders, or present some illegality, or the requisite waivers have not yet been signed. Though the campaign headquarters has not lost confidence in the ultimate success of the pool, they admitted being doubtful over the various legal technicalities.

Working on the presumption that the pool will be a success, arrangements have been made to set up the organization in immediate working order, set an opening price by Saturday and organize branch stations to handle the crops in nine districts in the state. An executive committee consisting of the following was elected: Arch Wilson, Douglas Chisholm, C. K. Schnabel, W. W. Lester and Harry Pyle. At a meeting of these directors, scheduled for Saturday morning, it was announced the price on the first offering will be set. It was indicated that the matter of price would necessarily involve a knowledge of the present crop and the amount of hold-over remaining from 1931, as well as an estimate on the various sizes contained in the new and old crops.

A report on the expenditures for the sign-up campaign indicated that the present drive has been one of the most economically conducted efforts of the kind ever undertaken.

Further definite action looking towards making the industry program operative took the form of an application for an "effective merchandising loan" addressed to the Federal Farm Board. It was announced that Dr. Hutzel Metzger of the farm board had already left for Washington to personally present the application and aid in securing its approval.

It was also announced that negotiations were proceeding towards completion on financial arrangements for grower advances with the Federal Intermediate Credit bank at Berkeley.

It was explained that the farm board loan will be used to get the plan into functioning order and that the intermediate credit loan will be available when prunes are properly warehoused after delivery.

In a late statement, Hugh Hersman, head of the drive, said, "We must not expect it to operate too smoothly at first. We must be patient and permit those in charge to plan out whatever difficulties may appear."

"We all know that any solution of our present situation will be better than no solution. I want to emphasize particularly that our first concern is to get all the waivers in and clear up those contracts which have riders and special written-in provisions. I think the prune growers of California should be complimented on the remarkable manner in which they have pushed through this campaign. This movement in many ways is a remarkable achievement and I sincerely hope it will bring about all the improvements in the prune industry the growers have hoped for."

COMMERCE GROUP TO HEAR THOMAS

Wendell Thomas, of the Santa Clara County Consolidated Chamber of Commerce, will give an address before the local commercial organization at their postponed meeting, to be held September 13, at 8 p. m. at the community hall. The subject of his speech has not yet been decided.

Dan Yeager, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, is getting in touch with the San Jose Flying Field to have them fly an airplane over Campbell in order to pick out the most suitable roof in town on which to paint the air sign of Campbell.

All people interested in the bus and telephone controversy are urged to attend, as representatives of both companies will be present at the meeting to present their cases, according to Dan Yeager. A watermelon feed has been scheduled for all present.

Grange Discusses Prune Pool Drive

A regular meeting of the Orchard City Grange was held last Tuesday evening with the Worthy Master, W. H. Woodbury presiding over the business.

Dr. Charles Breuer was instructed by Mrs. Ida Clendenning in the third and fourth degrees of Grange work. Dr. Breuer also spoke to the members present on the value of dried prunes in regard to the vitamins they contain.

During the lecture hour S. N. Hedegard gave a very interesting report on his experiences during the prune pool campaign. Other members of the Grange who are prune growers also gave talks on prunes. Mrs. F. B. Brown gave a brief talk on the principals of the grange. She and Judge Brown have been members for over 40 years.

An article written by Leigh Newcomb, which covered the activities of Frank Newcomb, was read by Horace Keesling.

A resolution favoring better laws governing the methods of fishing was adopted after a talk on the conservation of food fishes in the Bay of Monterey was given by Fred Hubbock. All members joined in a general discussion of this topic.

Dan Yeager Attending State P. O. Convention

Dan Yeager and family are leaving Saturday afternoon for Stockton where he will attend the bi-annual State Convention of City Carriers and City Clerks of the post-office. This convention is one of the most important post office meetings and it is estimated that several thousand postal employees will gather to hear Thomas Flaherty, representative of the Clerk's organization at Washington D. C. Entertainment for the four day convention includes a boat ride Sunday afternoon, up the deep water channel of the San Joaquin river. Tuesday, members of the convention will attend the State Fair at Sacramento.

Dan Yeager and his family intend remaining away until the middle of next week.

Campbell Schools To Open September 19

The Campbell Union high school will open for the 1932-33 term Monday September 19, according to D. H. Cramer, principal. Registration will be held Thursday and Friday, September 15 and 16. All students to enroll should register on one of those days, if possible. Mr. Cramer said they expected between 350 and 400 students to enroll.

The Campbell Grammar school will open on the same day with an expected enrollment of 800, stated Ira Abbott, principal.

The Cambrian, Union, Moreland and Almaden Union elementary schools will also open on Sept. 19, according to their principals.

LOCAL COUPLE GIVEN CHARVARI

Tuesday night a group of friends gathered at the Barlett house on Campbell avenue, home of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Eddlemon, and put on a charvari concert for the newly married couple. Very little of the "concert" gained admittance for the party, and then the entire company proceeded to the L. E. Eddlemon home where the groom's mother served sandwiches, cake and coffee.

VISITS SANTA CRUZ
Mrs. Harry White motored to Santa Cruz Monday to visit her mother, Mrs. E. E. Francois.

Local Cannery Closes Bulk of Packing Today

The J. C. Ainsley cannery closes their main canning for the season today. Fruit salad work will continue for a time, with a small crew of between 50 and 100.

The canning operations this year were considerably below normal years, and somewhat below last year's figures, according to F. V. Perrott, general manager of the plant. The cannery was opened approximately six weeks this year in comparison with a normal of about ten weeks. No figures could be obtained on total pack or general payroll. As soon as the fruit salad is packed, the cannery will close down, with but office force and warehouse workers, for another nine months.

Jones Service Station Gets New Paint Job

The Jones Service Station at the corner of Campbell avenue and Winchester road is this week receiving a new paint job. The interior of the building is being done in cream with a tan trim, and the outside, which may not be done until next week, will be white with a light orange trim. Fred Jones, popular proprietor, says he is tired of looking at the white and green which now adorns the exterior of the station.

DRIVE FOR FUNDS TO AID NEEDY CHILDREN OPENS

With the first part of their drive a complete success, the workers in charge of the lunches for needy children announce the opening of a campaign to raise funds for purchasing the meat, vegetables and milk necessary for the lunches.

"The citizens of Campbell have generously given fruit and jars and their time so that we now have over 800 quarts of fruit canned—enough to last us through the winter", Miss Rowena Farman, leader of the campaign said yesterday. "But fruit is only a small part of what we need. We cannot afford to let these children go hungry, and we must have money to buy the necessary supplies. Remember, it costs only 10 cents a meal and that every cent you give goes directly toward buying these meals. There is no operating costs, no labor charges, no profits. All time is donated by the ladies of the P. T. A. and other organizations, and the food is prepared at the school. I sincerely hope that all of you will be able to help this good cause," Miss Farman added.

Any amount will be welcomed and it can be given in one sum or in monthly installments. Already several organizations and individuals have contributed and beginning with next week, a list of these contributions will be published.

Money may be sent to the P. T. A. treasurer, Mrs. G. E. Jeffers, Route 1, Box 518, Campbell. For further information, phone Miss Rowena Farman, Campbell 211.

The committee in charge is now making arrangements to secure the support of civic, religious and social organizations. These organizations proved tremendously helpful last year, but considerably more aid from the citizens of Campbell will be needed this winter.

Besides the support of the individuals, appeals will be made to the merchants to assist in the continuance of these lunches by contributing as much of the food as they are able.

Matteson-Pierson Nuptials Observed

Of interest to the friends of the bride and her family is the news of the wedding of Miss Ruth Matteson to Arthur Pierson of Los Angeles at a quiet ceremony performed at Glendale, August 17.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Matteson of Campbell. She attended Campbell and San Jose schools and was prominent in dramatics here. For the past four years she has been with the Henry Duffy theatrical company.

The groom is under contract to appear in several pictures for the Fox studios.

Following their honeymoon at Agua Caliente, the couple will make their home in Los Angeles.

ATTEND MEETING

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Yeager, their small son, and Mrs. Mary Schaffer left Saturday evening to attend the meeting of the Rural Mail Carriers of the Eighth Congressional district at Pacific Grove. Picnic suppers and general entertainment featured the two-day get-together. They returned Sunday night.

State Distribution of Supplies Now Well Under Way

Sacramento, Aug. 31—Five additional counties have established their emergency food administration councils, new offerings of food stores in considerable quantity have been made and actual distribution of emergency supplies under both state and local direction is actively under way, according to a news bulletin issued here today by the state food administration.

Quantities of foodstuffs have been moved into both Marysville and Santa Cruz through transportation facilities offered to the state. All other orders received by either the county food councils or the clearing house set up by the state food administration, will start rolling as soon as adequate means of conveyance can be found. The transportation problem is proving a difficult and trying one, but is committee of railroad, steamship being handled by a representative and truck line executives appointed by State Food Administrator Dudley Moulton.

The five counties completing their food administration councils within the week are: Inyo, Tulare, Tuolumne, Ventura and Solano. This brings the number of such councils to 19, and the administrator has been given to understand that more are being formed.

Among the offerings during the week are 50 tons of cabbages in San Francisco, two carloads of fancy yellow canned peaches in Fresno, 200 crates of lettuce and 1,000 sacks of carrots, also in San Francisco. The food administration is now concentrating on the effort to move these supplies as they are ordered through its clearing house.

One notable offering made to the state during the week was the output from 40 acres of prunes from a grower near Jackson, Amador county, the grower stating that he would be willing to enter into any agreement that would be satisfactory to the state. Tons of pears at Colusa, apples at Vacaville and oranges at Porterville have been offered on the same basis.

As fast as these offers are received they are being relayed to the State Department of Social Welfare, headed by Mrs. Rheba Crawford Splivalo, who endeavors to arrange for their utilization by the most convenient relief agency. In turn Mrs. Splivalo passes on to the food administration all requests for food stores for dispatch to the proper food supply sources.

The information coming into the state's clearing house is revealing the tremendous scope of the present relief movement in California, as handled by county or municipal relief agencies. In Napa county the local relief organization is reported to have obtained several carloads of flour for distribution to those incapable of doing manual labor.

AND AGAIN

Once more we ask for aid for this winter's needy grammar school students. We ask it, not because there has been no response, but because the need is great and the means small. So much is needed to insure a year's successful operation of the free lunches that there can be no stop to a campaign that has so worthy a goal.

Through the willing help of the citizens of Campbell, sufficient jars and fruit have been obtained. Enough has been given or pledged to furnish each needy child with a helping of fruit throughout the winter. But even more than fruit is needed—milk and meat and vegetables and bread and butter, so that each child can have an honest meal. This takes money and The Press joins the committee in asking you to give as much as you can.

The committee is also asking for the aid of various local organizations. There are many groups of civic, fraternal and social activity in this community which should enter into this drive with fervor. It is these organizations, with their full memberships and authorized directors who could be of inestimable value. They pride themselves on their performance of duty, on their civic obligations, on their charity, on their helpfulness. This is the best time for them to come forward with a helping hand. The need is real and their obligation is clear. If these organizations would help, they can offer the services of their group to furnish time, supplies or money to buy the food as needed during the year. Get in touch with the workers at the grammar school cafeteria and do your share to make Campbell's future citizens healthy and happy

INDIAN SUMMER MEDITATION

Indian summer weather is now with us, and soon the leaves will turn red, and slowly flutter to the ground. The wind will lightly wave the defiant weeds at the side of the road. The sky will be vast, and it will be cloudless, presenting an open countenance that serenely showers a benediction on the world below. It will be warm and comfortable and the air will be filled with the scent of fruit growing, drying, decaying. Ants will scurry across a desert of dust in the roadway. The sky will have no clouds, the night no frost. All will be quiet and peaceful.

With such thoughts, we disdainfully look on political campaigns, market prices, wars in China, spectacular fires in other cities, civic organizations and the general state of affairs of the world. A lassitude descends on the office and the staff wonders why a paper must be written and printed.

Though this sudden love of nature is overwhelming and though tabulating the day's news seems the most abhorrent possible task, we know ourselves (and a newspaper office) well enough to realize, even as we write, that the phone has but to ring, "There's something doing out . . . " and all the thoughts that one thinks during an Indian summer afternoon vanish as the mists of the night.

VICTORY IN SIGHT

Great victories are not won in a day. Objective after objective has to be taken. A defeat may be suffered in some sector. Sometimes the whole movement may be temporarily stopped. It is only the determined, unflagging drive that finally wins a great battle.

The prune growers are engaged in a battle of great magnitude. It is a battle against demoralized conditions. A battle to save their properties and safeguard themselves and their families.

The difficulties the prune industry stabilization plan has met with seem heartbreaking sometimes when consideration is given the months of hard, painstaking effort that has gone into it and the deplorable conditions it is designed to relieve. But those carrying along the fight should not be discouraged.

The campaign is now nearing its final objective. It can win.

Success is within easy grasp if the growers respond quickly. Their welfare and the welfare of their families are at stake. It is up to them. It is their responsibility, their opportunity to win victory.

A SIGN OF THE TIMES

Jobs are scarce. Jobs are extremely scarce. There is no question about it. Everyone is earnestly looking for a job, or tightly holding onto the one they still have, the one with diminishing returns. But where can one look? All industries and all business concerns offer little encouragement.

But there is one employer who isn't reducing his staff. There is one capitalist who is maintaining his organization, in the same quantity as it was before the depression. Knowing this, it can easily be imagined that the employment office will be crowded with applicants, especially since this employer periodically declares that all his jobs are open and that no matter how valued or experienced his help might be, he is provisionally fired. So, of course there is a grand free-for-all to get in on the vacant jobs. They even pay, and pay highly for the opportunity to try for the positions. Usually it is worse than employment agencies, as these applicants spend considerably more than their first month's salary check, without getting more than an even chance for the job. And by the time the job is won, most of the lucky (?) ones have spent all the salary they are going to get during the entire time they hold their jobs.

There were 649 seeking 139 jobs from this employer, the government. It is a depression which accounts for the largest number of candidates ever to run for office in the primary election in the state of California. But where, we wonder, did they get the money for their campaigns, and what did they promise to do in order to get it?

Nevertheless, there were 649 of them in this preliminary weeding-out process. Elsewhere, you can find a list of those that passed this test. Next, they have to indulge in another conflict in November. And that, too will cost money. But the money is spent on newspapers and advertising and printing and food and many other things so, we suppose, it comes under the general head of: A Good Thing. But you see how scarce jobs are, and how much one will do to get one.

A WORD TO THE WISE

Now that the primaries are over, and the victorious candidates are getting ready to battle the opposition while the defeated are licking their wounds, it is time for all to be magnanimous. The winners can afford to be, the losers can't afford not to be. The primaries are miniature civil wars, a fight within an organization. The job now is to consolidate forces, to iron out difficulties, smooth over points of conflict and unite behind the winning candidates. Whichever party, Democrat or Republican, does this more successfully will win the battle in November, so close is the division between the two parties. Never before has the Democratic party registered a million voters in California and even though the Republicans still have a majority of approximately half a million, many of those votes will be lost to them if the party continues their interparty warfare. Every member of the Republican party must get behind the candidate supported by the majority of the party and disregard, at least for two years, those who were defeated.

These are not "words of wisdom" but average common sense. The sting of disappointment is still strong as the result of Tuesday's primaries, so we will have to take a lesson from the Democrats who are past masters in the art of interparty warfare. Their lack of success nationally, is in a great part due to their inability to get behind the candidates who win their nomination. Just remember the fight between McAdoo and Al Smith at Madison Square Garden and the Smith-Raskob and Roosevelt fight this summer and you will readily see the importance of solidarity in this year of shifting voters. Let the Democrats excel in their party splits and the November election is won.

THE GOVERNMENT PRINTING RACKET

The United States government scatters approximately 300,000 pamphlets, documents and bound books over the country every working day. In the 1931 fiscal year the printing office issued almost 3,500,000,000 copies of printed matter. It is now doing still better. In the six months following July 1, 1931, the amount of type set was 129,000,000 ems greater than in the same period the previous year.

This is at a time when taxes of all kinds have jumped, in the face of a lowered national income. The government printing department offers a fertile field for some real and needed economy.

THE FARMERS CORNER

By Ralph H. Taylor

Can the American farmer, and the California farmer especially, be kept out of foreign markets?

How real is the threat to California agriculture embodied in the recent drives of individual nations toward agricultural self-sufficiency?

Those questions, which represent one of the most critical problems confronting agriculture today, will be answered shortly with authentic information gathered by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Directed by the United States senate to investigate "restrictions on international trade in major agricultural products throughout the world," the department will investigate the measures now being employed by several leading nations to guarantee the economic position of home farm products.

Promising to throw actual light on the seriousness and extent of this threat to American exports, the federal department will also study the effect that the "patronize your home industries" movement has had upon American farm products and the welfare of American farmers.

It is the correct approach to a most serious problem, which, in the past, has unfortunately been marked by a great deal of political ballyhoo and very little actual study. California farmers, whose products are marketed throughout the civilized world, have more at stake in the proper solution of this problem than the farmers of any other area in the United States.

The most reassuring aspect of the whole situation is the fact that no nation, since the beginning of time, has ever been successful in an attempt at self-sufficiency.

The partial breakdown of efforts to prorrate California orange shipments, patterned after the successful "lemon agreement," again focuses attention on the complete inability of individualism to meet modern day conditions in the agricultural industry.

The California Fruit Growers Exchange has made a remarkable fight to insure orderly and profitable marketing of the orange crop, but the action of other shippers in discontinuing their cooperation under the "Valencia proration agreement" has thrown the entire agreement into discard. The exchange has advised its members that "it is not possible with a large crop, such as California has this year, for exchange growers to bear all the burden of protecting price levels by withholding fruit from market while other shippers move all their fruit."

Until California farmers and marketing organizations—cooperatives as well as independents—learn that individualism is a menace, rather than the royal road to financial independence, agriculture will pay the bill in glutted markets and unprofitable returns. While this statement may seem paradoxical, both growers and marketing agencies must be concerned about the interests of others if they would protect their own interests. The time has passed when any farmer can successfully "go it alone."

Certain it is, that if agriculture doesn't work out its own solution of this problem government will step in. California farmers, members of cooperatives and independents alike, have for years been opposed to government regulation of the farmers' marketing agencies, largely because they feared the control would be political rather than economic.

But agriculture, if it expects to work out its own salvation, free

BOOKS

Something New, by P. G. Wodehouse. 1915.

This week we discuss something far different from any of the previously reviewed works.

Here is a book that matters but little in the scheme of things. It will not make you any wiser, any finer or any richer. It tells you little of the condition of the world, nor does it make any study of the phenomena of social schemes.

It isn't written well, nor is it a contribution of any worth to the world's literature. In fact, it isn't even up to the author's usual standard.

But in its small niche, the book does amuse, with a gay and non-sensical banter. It is the humor of the politely ridiculous, of the socially far-fetched, of the drawing-room imbecility. His books are simply littered with half-witted Freddie Threepwoods and doddering Lord Eswards who clutter up the landscape of pleasant English country homes.

There is always a plot, but one usually looks upon it with, as the author would say, as much repulsion as a vegetarian would look upon a caterpillar in his salad. It is just there, what? One must make the best of it and all that.

Put, if the night is comfortable and the air pleasant, one forgets such literary obligations as a plot and trips along, admiring the silly nonsense that covers the plot with a blanket of amusement. One really doesn't care what the characters do, as long as they do something.

In this book, they do many things, from stealing scarabs to taking exercise. And there is some benign idiocy over everything that any of them does, from the honest American, George Emerson, to the dignified butler, Mr. Beach. No matter how serious they are when making love, or how cautious when stealing scarabs, nor how earnest when digging in gardens, they are always able to appear like good-natured but fairly satisfactory morons. And since one's enjoyment increases in direct proportion to the difference in mentality between yourself and the characters in the book you are reading, then you have the recipe for a pleasant evening. And this will furnish you with that. But if you go around for a few days with a "Eh what, chapie," type of conversation, you must blame Mr. Wodehouse, not —C. S. H.

News of the Week from Campbell Churches

SERMON ON BELIEF MADE BY PASTOR

Last Sunday morning, C. E. Irons, the pastor of the local Methodist church, took for his text John 5:24, "He that heareth my word, and believeth on Him that sent me, hath everlasting life." He deduced from this text the above subject. The following is a portion of the sermon delivered:

Does it matter what I believe? There are many people who think that it does not. Their view is that whether we are Catholic, or Protestant, Christians, Mohammedans, or Buddhists is of very little importance, so long as our life is good. There is enough truth about it to make it very plausible, and enough error to make it very dangerous. Where there is substantial agreement, trifling differences of opinion are unimportant. Dogmas and religious beliefs that have their vitality and no longer apply in the circumstances and times in which we live should be disregarded. But the opinion that it does not matter what we believe when we turn a half-truth into a whole-truth is a dangerous doctrine, or because some matters of belief are indifferent, therefore all matters of belief are indifferent has a very injurious effect on conduct.

If we carefully study this subject we will find that it does matter what we believe for the things we believe actually makes us what we are. Whether we are good, bad, or indifferent is caused by what we believe. Thought is the man. If you are religious, or irreligious, Christian, or non-Christian, you are such simply because of the beliefs you hold. What you believe, you either are, or are becoming.

You believe that you have a weak heart. Your heart may be perfectly sound, but in the course of a few weeks, by walking slowly, avoiding exercise and effort you will have caused yourself to become almost an invalid. You get the idea that you are unpopular, and that everybody regards you with dislike and suspicion; it may be purely a nervous feeling and the people regard you with the greatest affection; but the idea has so worked upon you that in a short time you will be regarded with suspicion.

There are religious organizations that believe and teach that unless you hold strictly to their faith and doctrine one cannot be saved. Another class repudiates all belief as unnecessary to salvation. To call a man orthodox, in some circles, is to reflex on his intelligence. To stamp a man as dogmatic is to stamp him as strong in assertion but weak in argument. Both of these views are in error. Both of these cases have a tendency to view salvation mechanically which might take place without much connection with the moral and spiritual life of the person.

Some view salvation as a sort of rescue from an impending external danger, a sort of satisfying a judgment standing against one on the books of heaven—a removal of a saved person from a place of danger to a place of safety—keeping out of hell and getting into heaven.

Such a view leads a person to feel somehow that reason and conscience have little to do with the case—that salvation is found in the due performance of some religious rite.

Simple intellectual assent to a dogma will never save anybody, and the simple rejection of a dogma can never be sufficient for rejection by God. The guilt or innocence of a soul will never be determined by the rules of any sort of an organization, but by a person's attitude toward his ideals of righteousness. God will judge every man according to the light he has had, or according to the light he may have had.

All beliefs may be resolved into four. Your view must be atheist, pantheist, deist, or Christian. Everyone holds one, or another, of these views, and that literally is shaping your life, you are becoming the expression of the view you hold.

Suppose a man is an atheist. That implies that he feels that there is no power higher than himself. There is in all men a tendency to worship, hence if there be no power higher than himself, nor better than himself, whom will he worship? Of course he does not go to church to worship himself, but he worships himself just the same. He is a worshipper of man.

A second possible view of the universe is pantheism. Some may not recognize their views under that name and would be surprised to be told that they are pantheists. We have related this view to India but the product of such a view of life is almost identical with atheism. According to this view you touch God everywhere, in yourself and in others. This view leads to a disappearance of any distinction between good and evil. God in everything, everywhere, then he is just as near to the impure as to the pure. According to the pantheist there is no higher, or lower. He is seen in the sensual appetites; he is found in indulgence in them.

These statements that I have made may be verified, and are being verified every day by travelers. China exactly reproduces in effect the Buddhist view of the universe. This, too, is essentially atheism. China is gross, stolid, cruel, intellectual, but never progressive. Civilized, yes, but always decaying. God has given place to the worship of disembodied spirits of ancestors.

Take America. Faults do we have? Many of them. I wish they were fewer. But with all our faults, America is free, we try to be just, we are progressive. All one needs to do is compare our country with any of these we have considered. The Christian conception of God is in America. If we had the Chinese idea, we would be like the Chinese.

Possessions Entrusted To Us By God's Bounty

It is only presumption that does not recognize that finally we are dependent upon God for everything we have.

Back of our toiling and achievement is His bounty and beneficence. Ps. 24:1; 50:10; 89:11. "This is my Father's world."

"I believe in God . . . Almighty!" But this at once carries with it its challenging obligation—What I have is held in trust. Am I using it faithfully?

A Chinaman thinks he can fool God. We know better. It is no use to put on a sanctimonious face, go through religious performances on Sunday. We as Christians believe that God sees right through us. There is no secret hidden from him. Our very thoughts are known to him. You think that this does not effect your living? What I am within, I must be without. Some day you must stand before God and there render your final account. Does not this have a very noticeable effect upon your actions?

Washington Lincoln, Stand Out Over All

Deut. 34:10. "And there arose not a prophet since in Israel like unto Moses."

February is a great month in American history, for it saw the birth of our two greatest presidents.

On the whole we have been rather fortunate in our chief magistrates; in ability and character our presidents would compare favorably with an equal number of emperors, kings, or supreme rulers in any other country. Yet among all our presidents, two—Washington and Lincoln—stand out with such obvious supremacy that it would be a disservice to any other man who held this office to name him in their company. If we say "Washington, Lincoln and . . ." no other president, no matter how distinguished, could endure that association. Considering the fact that some of these men have possessed genius, and many have shown nobility of character, it is curious that after so many years, Washing-

BELOW appear the names of the professional men and Santa Clara county official leaders who have, by their endorsement and support, made possible this department of the Campbell Press . . . Voluntarily they have identified themselves with the pleasurable task of building the community around the church, which is recognized as the pivot point of our social, economic and political structure.

U.S. Shown As "Beast Power" In Evangelist Speech

The second lecture on the United States as pictured in Bible prophecy was given to a large audience by Evangelist J. Lee Neil Sunday night at the Community hall.

The prophecy points out several unmistakable points of identification that the second beast power of Rev. 13 is Protestant and Republican America. This power is, according to Mr. Neil's interpretation, to form an image or likeness to the first beast (or the union of Church and state under Rome in old Europe) and to enforce by law an act of homage to that power. These two powers uniting on common ground, will go so far as to boycott and later to kill those who have not followed the apostasy to false worship, the prophecy indicated. They have a common "mark" of power that will be discussed next Sunday night.

Mr. Neil said that even now there are forces at work in our legislative assembly seeking to accomplish this end.

Thursday night the subject will be "Entrance Requirement for Heaven." Mr. Neil invites anyone doubting the evidence in these prophecies to examine them with him.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH NOTES

Whatever changes take place in the national attitude towards prohibition we cannot let the Wright Act fail. It is our only enforcement. The youth of Campbell, representing the religious organizations of Campbell, invite you to come to the Congregational church Sept. 11 at 7:30 p. m. to a big town's rally on this subject. A good speaker will be supplied and the meeting will be inspiringly led by a large choral of youth. Book that date. Sunday, Sept. 11. Come and hear, anyway.

A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend the Congregational church next Sunday morning at 11 a. m. Preacher, Rev. J. H. Bennett.

Group meetings for youth at 6:30 in the evening.

Thrift sale of the Guild of the Congregational church Sept. 1-2 in the Campbell hotel. Clothes, etc., are needed for the sale. Miss Lewis will be glad to hear from anyone having articles for the sale. Phone 131J or 11J.

Church Demands Only Few Hours of Our Time

The church asks some of our time. It does not ask much—only a few hours in the entire week. But even that is sometimes more than we are willing to give. Time spent for work and for recreation sometimes absorbs all the time we have for the church. The plea of necessary work and of desirable recreation may be valid in its place, but if we let it, bit by bit, crowd out the church, as the camel crowded the Arab out of his tent, we are putting secondary things in primary place. Do you let the secondary things of life go thundering through on the main line while the main things of life stand on the side-track? If you do, switch the trains.

DEER—WOMAN

Here's a joke on the old sports. Leonard Smith and George Whipple took their annual hunting trip in the coast range near Lucia last week. What! no deer! Yep, no deer. After considerable persuasion, Ada Leonard's sister accompanied them on some of their daily treks. She proved herself the hunter, bagging two, one of them a five pointer, weighing 165 pounds dressed. From now henceforth Ada will probably be one of the regular camp.

Motorists Warned As School Opens

Reopening of schools for the fall term after the long vacation period has brought more than a million children back to their classrooms, placing an obligation upon all motorists to exercise the greatest caution when driving through school zones. This is the message presented by the California Committee on Public Safety in a statement announcing a statewide campaign on this subject for the month of September.

"Obey the Rule - Slow Past a School" is the phrase adopted by the committee for use as a campaign slogan. The committee calls attention to the fact that many thousands of younger children are making their way to and from school unattended for the first time in their lives. These children, it is pointed out, have not had the training in traffic safety which has been given children in the higher grades. Thus an additional hazard is created and most of the responsibility for avoiding accidents to these children is up to the motorist. New students, new schools, new friends and unfamiliar routes all add to the safety problem of the school child.

Motorists have grown accustomed to seeing empty school yards during the vacation period and again to give that alertness and care required by law in driving past a school may not come automatically, the committee's statement continues. Each operator must realize anew his obligations and proceed past school zones with care and caution, giving particular attention to those occasions when children are endeavoring to cross the street or highway.

The legal department of the California Automobile association, assisting in the campaign, draws

CALIFORNIA LEADS NATION AS AUTO TOURIST MECCA

Californians are under no illusions as to the popularity of their home state as a tourist paradise. They are constantly seeing an endless parade of "foreign" cars on their highways; cars, that is, bearing the license plates of other states.

A survey recently concluded by the United States Bureau of Public Roads shows that there is an average mileage of 412,000 daily traveled on California highways by vehicles registered from other states. That is a vast figure. It represents about one-twentieth of the total vehicle movement in the state every day.

While the federal survey covers only 11 western states, it is to be doubted that any other state in the union could show a comparable aggregated mileage traveled by foreign vehicles. So, although California is not the capital of the motor industry in respect to motor car production, it may easily claim that honor for the secondary industry built up by the automobile—motor touring.
